

March 3, 2009

WANTED: TOMORROW'S LEADERS*IUJ's Graduate School of International Management introduces 3 new scholarships*

(Niigata, Japan) – The Graduate School of International Management (GSIM) at the International University of Japan (IUJ), which is the only Japanese Business School ranked in the Top 100 global business schools by the Economist Intelligence Unit, today announced the launch of 3 new Scholarships. These scholarships consist of a full tuition waiver for the entire 2-year Masters of Business Administration (MBA) program and the 1-year Masters of E-business Management Program at IUJ.

“As the global economy struggles under the weight of one of the worst and most far-reaching crises in history, now more than ever businesses of every scale and scope are serious need of leaders who can truly help to solve complex challenges,” said Dr. Philip Sugai, Dean of the GSIM. “With these full tuition scholarships, we are hoping to bring those with the potential to become effective leaders to our campus to hone the skills and capabilities they will need to excel in this new business environment.”

For the incoming class of 2009, three (3) Scholarships will be offered. Specifically, one scholarship will be made available for each of the following groups of applicants:

Those who have shown clear examples of their potential to become a visionary leader, and who are:

- 1) Japanese Nationals (living in Japan or Overseas)
- 2) Women in business
- 3) Those completing The Japan Exchange and Teaching (JET) Program

In addition to completing the traditional application documents for the MBA programs at IUJ, applicants for these GSIM Future Leaders scholarships must complete an additional essay which delves deeper into their leadership aspirations and past achievements that qualify them for consideration.

For more information about these scholarships and the Graduate School of International Management at IUJ, please visit: <http://ibs.iuj.ac.jp/LeadersWanted>

For additional information, Japanese and English inquiries can be sent to IUJ Public Relations Officer Rumiko Anazawa, by email at media@iuj.ac.jp, by phone 025-779-1116, or Fax 025-779-1188.

About The International University of Japan

The International University of Japan (IUJ) (www.iuj.ac.jp) was founded in 1982 with a mission to provide graduate level education in English to develop future leaders in the global society. Students from over 50 countries study and live together at IUJ in an exciting environment that fosters mutual understanding and international friendship. IUJ consists of two graduate schools: the Graduate School of International Management (GSIM) and the Graduate School of International Relations (GSIR). The GSIM offers two professional degree programs; a two-year Master of Business Administration (MBA) and a one-year Master of E-Business Management program. The GSIR offers 3 two-year Master's Degree programs; the International Development Program (IDP), the International Peace Studies Program (IPSP) and the International Relations Program (IRP).